Question - Under what circumstances would Cuba be permitted to participate again in the OAS?

Answer - The decision by the Foreign Ministers at Punta del Este to exclude the Cuban Government from participation in the OAS was based on two grounds: its adherence to Marxism-Leninism and its alignment with the communist bloc. While I cannot, of course, speak for the OAS,<sup>b7</sup> the United States for its part would urge that a Cuban Government which rejects the tenets of Marxism-Leninism be welcomed back to the inter-American system. We remain confident that the Cuban people will not permanently tolerate the betrayal of their revolution to international communism. When the true leaders of Cuba succeed in returning their revolution to its original aims the United States for its part stands ready to recognize promptly and to enter into a friendly relationship with them or any other representative groups in Cuba that succeed in establishing a government responsive to the desires and aspirations of the Cuban people.

QUESTION - Under what circumstances would Cuba be permitted to participate again in the OAS?

ANSWER - The decision by the Foreign Ministers at Punta del Este to exclude the Cuban Government from participation in the OAS was based on two grounds: its adherence to Marxism-Leninism and its alignment with the communist bloc. While I cannot, of course, speak for the OAS; the United States for its part would urge that a Cuban Government which rejects the tenets of Marxism-Leninism and maintains an independent foreign policy be welcomed back to the inter-American system. We remain confident that the Cuban people will not permanently tolerate the betrayal of their revolution to international communism.

[The true leaders in Cuba have not fought to overthrow the Batista dictatorship merely to see their revolution handed to communists who supported and held high office in a Batista regime.] When these leaders succeed in returning their revolution to its original aims [and remove the communists and other Batista supporters] the United States for its part stands ready to recognise promptly and to provide a friendly relationship, assistance without regard over past relationships to them or any other democratic groups [in Cuba] that succeed in establishing a government responsive to the desires and aspirations of the Cuban people.
